Everybody Wins! DC hosts 11th Annual South River Scramble 2007 with Brianna Keilar, CNN Correspondent as Honorary Emcee.

WASHINGTON DC (July 19, 2007) -- Everybody Wins! DC (EW!DC) hosted the 11th Annual South River Scramble at the South River Golf Links (Edgewater, MD) on Monday, July 16, 2007. The event attracted 80 sponsors and participants including principals from the District of Columbia Public School System. The banquet and ceremonies were hosted by CNN Correspondent Brianna Keilar

EW!DC is the largest children's literacy and mentoring organization in the Washington Metropolitan Area and the tournament helped to raise funds and awareness for EW!DC's children's mentoring and literacy programs. Keilar handed out an award to the winning foursome sponsored by Nike Inc, and lead by Team Captain Orson Porter.. Included in the attached photo are Kevin Taylor, Orson Porter, Mary Salander, Executive Director for EW!DC, Brianna Keilar, Tony Covington, and Bandele McQueen.

The following sponsors supported the South River Scramble: General Dynamics; Verizon; Baker Donelson Bearman, Caldwell & Berkowitz, PC; CareFirst BlueCross BlueShield, CTIA- The Wireless Association; Sidley Austin LLP; The Washington Post; Burgess & Niple; Congressman Ray LaHood; Medtronic Inc; and Nike Inc.

EW!DC will be launching a recruitment drive to engage companies, non-profits, law firms, and federal agencies to get involved as Reading Mentors with underserved children in the Washington Metropolitan Area. Interested individuals are encouraged to visit <http://www.everybodywinsdc.org/> or contact Program Director Lucinda Mulzac at 202.347.9467 ext 12.

Through its programs Everybody Wins! DC reaches more than 3,000 at-risk students each year in 31 Title I public elementary schools throughout the metro region.
